2 JUNE 1993

DEAR MRS. COUP,

I ENJOYED TALKING TO YOU THIS AFTERNOON REGARDING MY GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH ON THE COMP FAMILIES OF AMERICA. YOUR INPUT WAS MOST HELPFUL.

IT'S APPARENT THAT MUCH WORK REMAINS TO BE DONE IN ORDER TO ASCERTAIN WHETHER THERE IS IN FACT A CONNECTION WITH THE PERRY COUNTY COMP'S OR IF RECORDS OF WILLS, CENSUSES, ETC. OF THE 1800'S HAVE BEEN INCORRECTLY READ AS COMP RATHER THAN COUP.

ENCLOSED ARE RECORD FORMS FOR YOUR FAMILY AS WELL AS FOR SELECTED RELATED FAMILIES. IF YOU WOULD BE SO KIND AS TO PROVIDE ANY INFORMATION YOU MAY HAVE THAT IS NOT SHOWN FOR THE FAMILIES ON THE ENCLOSED FORMS, I WOULD BE MOST APPRECIATIVE. LIKEWISE, ANY COPIES OF OLD NEWSPAPER ARTICLES, BIRTH/DEATH NOTICES, ETC. THAT YOU CAN SEND ARE HELPFUL TOWARD MY RESEARCH EFFORTS. YOU INDICATED THAT A FAMILY MEMBER HAD DONE SOME RESEARCH AS A SCHOOL PROJECT. IF I COULD RECEIVE A COPY OF IT, IT MIGHT HELP DIRECT ME TO RESOURCES THAT COULD AID FURTHER RESEARCH.

IF YOU HAVE ADDRESSES AND/OR TELEPHONE NUMBERS FOR ANY INDIVIDUALS ON THE FORMS, PLEASE LIST THEM ON THE REVERSE SIDE OF THE RESPECTIVE FORM. YOUR ASSISTANCE IS GREATLY APPRECIATED.

ENCLOSED IS A SELF-ADDRESSED STAMPED ENVELOPE FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE IN REPLYING.

VERY TRULY YOURS,

Daniel S. L. Comp

PIONEERS OF FRENCH CREEK—DAVID AND JOHN MEAD VISIT THE VALLEY IN 1787—APPEARANCE OF THE COUNTRY AT THAT TIME—FIRST SETTLEMENT MADE IN MAY, 1788, BY DAVID, JOHN AND JOSEPH MEAD, THOMAS MARTIN, JOHN WATSON, JAMES FITZ RANDOLPH, THOMAS GRANT, CORNELIUS VAN HORNE AND CHRISTOPHER SNYDER—THEY PLOW AND PLANT A FIELD OF CORN IN THE BOTTOM WEST OF FRENCH CREEK—SELECTION OF LANDS—DAVID AND JOHN MEAD BRING OUT THEIR FAMILIES—ARRIVAL OF DARIUS MEAD, ROBERT FITZ RANDOLPH AND FREDERICK BAUM—FIRST BIRTH IN THE SETTLEMENT—BIOGRAPHIES OF DAVID MEAD, JOHN MEAD, CORNELIUS VAN HORNE, ROBERT FITZ RANDOLPH AND EDWARD FITZ RANDOLPH—THE HERITAGE THEY LEFT TO THEIR DESCENDANTS.

IN nearly all great and thoroughly organized armies there is a corps of active, brave men, usually volunteers, whose self-imposed duty it is to go ahead and prepare the way with ax, mattock and pick for the advance of the fighting rank and file. They are called pioneers, and are armed with guns, as well as implements of labor, for their position and their work is a dangerous one. They are obliged to keep a constant lookout for an ambush, in momentary fear of a sudden attack, for the enemy, with a better knowledge of the country, is liable any instant to hem them in and overpower them with a superior force. The men who pushed their way into the wilderness west of the Allegheny River, along French Creek and its tributaries, and all those earlier settlers of Western Pennsylvania and Ohio from the river to the lake were the pioneers of one of the grandest armies that earth ever knew. It was the army of peace and civilization that came, not to conquer an enemy by blood, carnage and ruin, but to subdue a wilderness by patient toil; to make the wild valley blossom as the rose; to sweep away the forest, till the soil, make fertile fields out of the wooded slopes, and build houses, which were to become the abodes of happiness and plenty. The pioneers were the reliant vanguard of such an army as this.

The first band of hardy and resolute men who penetrated the valley of French Creek with the intention of permanent settlement, wending their way up that stream from the Allegheny, found a land fertile as heart could wish, fair to look upon, and fragrant with the thousand fresh odors of the woods in early spring. The long, cool aisles of the forest led away into mazes of vernal green, where the swift deer bounded by unmolested, and as yet unscarred by the sound of the woodman's ax or the sharp ring of his rifle. They looked upon the timbered hills and the tall grass of the rich bottoms, jeweled with strange and brilliant flowers, where once the Indian had his fields of corn. All about them were displayed the lavish bounties of Nature. The luxuriant growth of forest and wild fruit-bearing shrubs and vines, gave evidence of the strength of the virgin soil and the kindness of the climate.

Such were the scenes that everywhere met the eye of David and John Mead, who in the summer of 1787, left their homes in Northumberland County, Penn., and traveling westward until they reached the valley of French Creek, explored it with the intention of making it their future abode. These men had become disgusted with the difficulties they had encountered in the conflicting claims of Pennsylvania and Connecticut to the lands previously settled by them in the Wyoming Valley, and prepossessed with the appearance of the territory now embraced in Crawford County, on their return to Sunbury, gave a glowing account of its beauties and the richness of its soil. In the spring of 1788, a company was formed consisting of David Mead, John Mead, Joseph Mead, Thomas Martin, John Watson, James Fitz Randolph and Thomas Grant, who were also joined by Cornelius Van Horne and Christopher Snyder, who arrived at Sunbury, from New Jersey, about the time the party was ready to start for French Creek Valley. These nine persons were the first settlers in what is now the county of Crawford.

According to the reminiscences of Cornelius Van Horne, the party reached French Creek on the 12th of May 1788, though Rev. Timothy Alden, in a biography of Gen. Mead, published in the Allegheny Magazine for September, 1816, gives 1789 as the year of their arrival, but the former is, doubtless, the correct date. They encamped and passed the first night under the spreading branches of a large cherry tree that stood near the site of the east end of Mercer Street bridge in the south part of Meadville, and spent the following day exploring the lands in this vicinity. They then erected a temporary dwelling on the east bank of French Creek, which they crossed above the mouth of Cussewago, and commenced plowing in one of the fields that bore evidences of pre-historic occupancy. Four horses were hitched to the plow, which was held by David Mead, while Cornelius Van Horne rode one of the horses and thus drove the team. They plowed some eight or ten acres, which they planted in corn, but the June freshet in the creek destroyed the growing crop. As soon as the water subsided, the field was replanted, and though not fully matured on account of the lateness of the season, it yet yielded sufficiently to allay all fears of want in that direction. Thus was a permanent settlement effected in Crawford County, and the little band of hardy pioneers, the nucleus around which subsequent settlers gathered, were venturing farther into the dence forest then covering the land.

Of the nine persons forming the original pioneer band to the valley of French Creek, but four, David Mead, John Mead, James Fitz Randolph and Cornelius Van Horne, became permanent settlers of the county. Soon after reaching their destination, a selection of land took place, David Mead choosing a tract on the west bank of French Creek, immediately north of the island, while John Mead's selection adjoined his brothers' on the north. James Fitz Randolph's choice was a tract lying about two miles south of the site of Meadville, and east of the creek. Thomas Grant selected the land whereon Meadville was subsequently laid out, and Cornelius Van Horne chose a farm about a mile and a half south of Grant, but on the west side of French Creek. Early in the fall of the same year, Thomas Grant, weary of the trials and dangers of frontier life, abandoned his land and returned to Northumberland County. David Mead at once took up the Grant tract and built a large log house, subsequently known as "Mead's Block-house," near the site of James E. McFarland's residence on Water Street, in Meadville. He was the owner of three tracts of land, called in the patents "Meadville," "Mill Tract" and "Cussewago Island." Joseph Mead, Thomas Martin, John Watson and Christopher Snyder are not known to have made any selections, and remained only a brief period in this locality.

In the autumn of 1788, David and John Mead went back to Northumberland County for their families, and brought them to their respective cabins, which they had previously erected, and these were the first homes of civilization established on French Creek. The following year (1789), Darius Mead, the father of David and John Mead, Robert Fitz Randolph and Frederick Baum brought out their families, adding considerable in strength and numbers to the little colony. The first-mentioned made his son David's house his home until the breaking-out of Indian hostilities. Mr. Fitz Randolph settled some two miles south of "Mead's Block-house," on land selected the previous year by his son, James, while Mr. Baum located about a mile further down French Creek, both being within the present limits of Mead Township.

In 1789 occurred the first birth in the settlement, viz., Sarah, daughter of David and Agnes (Wilson) Mead, who was the first white child born within the territory now comprising Crawford County, and doubtless the first (excepting the French) in northwestern Pennsylvania west of the Allegheny River. She here grew to womanhood, and in September, 1816, was married to Rev. James Satterfield, of Mercer County, Penn., where she resided until her death.

These families were soon joined by others, who had heard of the vacant lands and the fertility of the soil along French Creek; and thus, in process of time, each one adding something to the wealth of the settlement, they became surrounded with some of the comforts of civilized life. But it must not be supposed that this desired end was attained without enduring much toil and privation and encountering great danger. It is perhaps impossible for us after the lapse of nearly one hundred years to appreciate fully the extent of these privations, toils and dangers. Yet we can form some idea of them when we reflect that at first it was a struggle for life, as all provisions necessary for their support had to be transported from Pittsburgh or the Susquehanna settlements. They were in the heart of the wilderness, far from the scenes of their earlier years, surrounded by a savage foe, and knew not at what hour they might be summoned to deadly strife. Nevertheless, having come to stay, they remained in possession of their lands, except when driven therefrom by the Indian raids of 1791–92 and 1793, and many of them when laid beneath the sod left their possessions as a rich legacy to their children.

David Mead was born at Hudson, N. Y., January 17, 1752, and was the eldest son of Darius and Ruth (Curtis) Mead, natives of Connecticut, who purchased a farm and removed to Hudson immediately after their marriage. Here the family lived until David arrived at the years of manhood, when the homestead was sold and some valuable land obtained in Wyoming Valley, under a Pennsylvania title, but in consequence of adverse claims under Connecticut titles, the Meads left their land and took up their residence about six miles above the town of Northumberland, on the west bank of the North Branch of the Susquehanna River. About 1774 our subject married Agnes Wilson, a daughter of John and Janet Wilson, pioneers of Northumberland County, who bore him nine children, five of whom lived to maturity, as follows: William, Darius, Elizabeth, Sarah and Margaret. At an early period in the Revolutionary war the Indians began their savage onslaughts upon the defenseless frontier settlements of Pennsylvania, and during one of those raids, Asahel, the second eldest son of Darius Mead, fell a victim to Indian barbarity. The subject of this sketch removed his family to Sunbury, Penn., where he engaged in keeping a tavern, also erected and operated a distillery. By the close of the war he had accumulated a handsome property, and soon after the dawn of peace returned to his land in Wyoming Valley, supposing that the conflicting claims, as to title, were settled. In this, however, he was doomed to disappointment, for after expending considerable money in improvements, and undergoing much vexation in trying to obtain a clear title to his land, he was, at the end of three years, compelled to hastily collect a small portion of his household effects and with his family fly for safety to Sunbury. Here he immediately renewed his former pursuits, but destitute of capital, and a change in the times rendering business not very lucrative, his utmost efforts could effect little more than a bare support for his family.

In the meantime he had heard of the rich lands coming into market west of the Allegheny River, and in the summer of 1787, accompanied by his brother John, he visited the valley of French Creek. The following spring (1788) they were joined at Sunbury by seven others—all of whom came to the vicinity of Meadville. In the fall of 1788 General Mead, having erected a substantial log house near the site of James E. McFarland's residence, on Water Street, in Meadville, returned for his family, and was soon comfortably settled on the banks of French Creek. One of his first enterprises was the erection of a saw-mill in 1789–90, on the east bank of French Creek, just south of where the "Red Mill," now stands. It was operated by water power, a race being built across from Mill Run, which furnished the power. To this was afterward added a grist-mill, which he also carried on for some years. Three years passed away peacefully, when the little settlement was temporarily broken up by Indian incursions, which continued off and on for the succeeding four years, the settlers being forced to leave their improvements several times and go to the fort at Franklin for safety. Before this period Gen. Mead had carried on an extensive correspondence with the Pennsylvania authorities relative to contending claims to the Wyoming lands, and sometime after settling on French Creek, he obtained from the State a remuneration in land, to the amount of an official valuation of those of which he had been dispossessed in Wyoming Valley. His father was killed by the Indians in 1791, and his mother died at Meadville during the summer of 1794, being the first death which occurred from natural causes among the white settlers of Crawford County.

In 1795 Gen. Mead's wife died, and the following year he was married to Jennett Finney, a daughter of Robert Finney, to whom were born six children: five, Robert, Alexander, Catherine, Jane and Maria growing to maturity. Of his children by both marriages, William removed to the West and there died; Darius spent his life in Crawford and Venango Counties, but his latter days were passed in Venango Township, in the northern part of Crawford; Elizabeth married the Hon. Patrick Farrelly, and died in Meadville, August 24, 1811; Sarah became the wife of Rev. James Satterfield, of Mercer County, Penn., and there died; Margaret married William Moore, and died in Venango County, Penn.; Robert and Alexander removed to the West, and spent their lives on the frontier; Catherine married Lot Dunham, and died in Meadville; Jane became the wife of the Rev. William Hutchinson, a Presbyterian preacher who located at Bucyrus, Ohio, where she died; and Maria married William Gill, and resided until her death in Meadville.

Prior to his coming to French Creek, Gen. Mead held the office of Justice of the Peace, and on the 31st of March, 1796, he and Thomas Rees, of Erie, were appointed by Gov. Mifflin, Justices of the Peace for the district consisting of "the Township of Mead in the county of Allegheny," the official term being "so long as he shall live and behave himself well." Mead Township then embraced the whole of what is now Crawford and Erie Counties, while the block-house erected in 1794 was one of the places designated for holding elections. Upon the organization of Crawford County, March 12, 1800, he was appointed one of the Associate Judges, but resigned the following December. In September, 1803, he was again appointed, and served continuously on the bench until the time of his death. He was appointed Major-General of the Fourteenth, and afterward of the Sixteenth Division Pennsylvania Militia, by Gov. McKean, and re-appointed by Gov. Snyder, and during the war of 1812-15, rendered important services to Commodore Perry, in promptly marching with his corps to the defense of Erie, in the summer of 1813, when the fleet then in process of construction in Presque Isle Bay was threatened with destruction by the enemy. Gen. Mead continued to discharge the duties of this position until a law was enacted annulling all commissions in the militia.

In 1797, Gen. Mead built a frame residence at the head of Water Street, now the home of Dr. Edward Ellis, and here he died August 23, 1816, in the sixty-fifth year of his age. His appearance was striking, being six feet three and a half inches in height, and built in proportion, and he was also a man of great bodily strength. His features were large, regular and strongly marked with the lines indicative of reflection; and though generally sedate and grave, he was always affable, easy of access, and a total stranger to everything savoring of ostentation. He was a kind and faithful husband, an affectionate father, a stanch friend and a patriotic citizen, while his home was noted for the generous hospitality extended to all who came within its precincts. He possessed but a limited education, as he was entirely indebted to his mother for whatever instruction he had received during his childhood days. Highly appreciating the advantages of an education, he had fitted up at his own expense the block-house, which stood on the northeast corner of Water Street and Steer's Alley for school purposes, and here the first school in Crawford County was opened in 1798-99. He subsequently presented this property to the Meadville Female Seminary. In 1800 he was mainly instrumental in raising the $4,000 to build and establish the Meadville Academy, and was also one of the charter members in founding Allegheny College, as well as one of its most generous benefactors.

General Mead was a man of strong passions, and was sometimes very irritable, yet his principal characteristics were persevering patience and unrelaxing application to whatever he undertook or considered his duty. His vigorous mind was ever active, and constantly occupied with the affairs of life, and had he been favored with a liberal education, his talents would have entitled him to the first positions in the gift of his adopted State. He was the leading spirit of the pioneer band, who first settled the valley of French Creek, and while his name will forever be perpetuated in the city of Meadville, which he founded and fostered during the first years of its existence, his memory will be gratefully cherished as one of the pioneer fathers, who laid the foundation of one of the wealthiest and most flourishing counties in western Pennsylvania.

John Mead was born at Hudson, N. Y., July 22, 1756, and removed with his parents to Wyoming, thence to the north branch of the Susquehanna. He was married in Northumberland County, and in 1787, accompanied David to the valley of French Creek, being also one of the original nine who made the first permanent settlement in this county, in the spring of 1788. In the fall of the latter year he returned with his brother to Sunbury, and brought out his family. His land was the tract immediately above Vallonia, and his cabin stood on the west bank of French Creek, just east of the fair grounds, and between the stream and the ravine. Here he lived with his family, excepting during the dangerous period, from 1791 to 1804 inclusive, which he — 1794 spent near the block-house of his brother, or at Franklin, working on his farm whenever the state of the times would allow him to prosecute his labors. With the close of Indian hostilities, Mr. Mead was enabled to devote all his energy to the improvement of his land, and being a very quiet, retiring man we hear nothing of him in connection with public afairs. He died in June, 1819, leaving five sons and one daughter, viz: John, William, Joseph, Asahel, Chambers and Polly. The three first mentioned removed to Warren County, Penn., and there died. Asahel went to Missouri, and died in that State; Polly married John Camp, who, with his family removed to Missouri; and Chambers resided until his death on the old homestead in Vernon Township, leaving four sons and one daughter, all of whom live in this county.

Cornelius Van Horne was born in Huntington County, N. J., December 16, 1750, and was a son of Thomas and Jane (Ten Eyck) Van Horne, natives of New Jersey, of Holland descent. Cornelius was the eldest in a family of eight children—five sons and three daughters—and in 1757 removed with his parents to Sussex County, in the same State, where he grew up, receiving in his boyhood but three months' schooling. His father was twice elected to the Provincial Legislature of New Jersey, dying during his second term, and was also a Justice of the Peace, and an Associate Judge of Sussex County. He was the owner of a mill, and here Cornelius learned the milling business, which in after years proved of great advantage to him. Our subject served in the Revolutionary war, and upon the death of his father inherited several hundred acres of land in the Wyoming Valley. This land was located in Northampton County, and held by him under a Pennsylvania title, being a part of the territory over which so much trouble arose between Pennsylvania and Connecticut claimants. In 1784 he removed from Sussex County, N. J., to his land in Wyoming Valley, but in the fall of that year he with the other Pennsylvanians were driven off their lands by the claimants from Connecticut. Throughout this conflict Mr. Van Horne took a leading part on behalf of the Pennsylvania claimants, whose titles were subsequently confirmed by the courts, but it was not till long afterward that they received any compensation for the lands of which they had been dispossessed by Connecticut intruders.

During these troubles Mr. Van Horne had heard of the new lands just opened for settlement west of the Allegheny River, and concluded to explore them. In the spring of 1788 he and Christopher Snyder left New Jersey in a cart with two horses and a cow, and upon reaching Sunbury, Penn., joined the Meads, who were about starting West to settle in French Creek Valley, which they had visited the previous year. The party arrived at their destination on the 12th of May, 1788, and Van Horne selected a homestead west of French Creek, about a mile and a-half south of the confluence of the Cussewago with that stream, upon which was standing an unoccupied Indian hut. The plowing and planting of a field of corn by the little band of pioneers above the junction of Cussewago with French Creek has been previously related in this chapter. David Mead and Mr. Van Horne were the leading spirits in this first attempt at agriculture by the white settlers.

In October, 1788, his brother, Jacob Van Horne, and brother-in-law, Archibald Davison, with Davison's father, came out from New Jersey to see the country, and after a brief visit returned home taking our subject with them. He remained in New Jersey until the fall of 1789, when he came back to the settlement, but about Christmas again returned to his native State. In October, 1790, he made his third trip from the East, accompanied by Thomas Lansing and Peter and Mathias Colscher, with a wagon and team, but on reaching Pittsburgh and finding no road thence to the Cussewago settlement, he sold his wagon and left his horses for the winter close to Pittsburgh, whence he journeyed in a canoe up the Allegheny and French Creek to the site of Meadville. The story of the abandonment of the valley in the spring of 1791, by the few hardy pioneers then living here, the subsequent return of Van Horne and two companions, William Gregg and Thomas Ray, together with the killing of Gregg by the Indians, and the capture and subsequent escape of Van Horne and Ray, will be found in the succeeding chapter, to which we refer the reader for a full account of the thrilling incidents connected therewith.

Soon after Van Horne reached Fort Franklin, upon his escape from the Indians, he returned to New Jersey, but in the fall again came to French Creek, where he found a Sergeant and fifteen men guarding the settlement. He and Mathew Wilson were engaged by David Mead to operate his saw-mill, which stood just south of the "Red Mill" site on Water Street, in Meadville. They continued in Mead's employ until January, 1792, when the mill was closed on account of the stream which furnished the power freezing solid. The soldiers were withdrawn to Fort Franklin about the same time, and all of the settlers, excepting Van Horne and Wilson, removed to the fort; but these two frontiersmen with four friendly Indians, remained throughout the winter and spring at "Mead's Block-house." They purchased two young panthers from the Indians, and in the summer of 1792, traveled East with the animals, exhibiting at Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, New York and scores of smaller towns on their route. Wilson, who was a dark, swarthy man, dressed in the skins of wild beasts, and while exhibiting the panthers danced and sang Indian songs, and told in a swaggering manner blood-curdling stories of hair-breadth escapes from the savages of the West, as well as of the many persons he had rescued from Indian captivity, all of which was pure fiction, yet brought in the dimes and pleased their audiences. The partnership was finally dissolved, each taking one of the panthers and dividing the profits. Van Horne soon disposed of his pet, and went on a visit to his mother, in New Jersey, thence returned to the Mead settlement.

The fall of 1793 found the French Creek Valley almost abandoned for the more safe proximity of Fort Franklin. In October Gen. Wilkins wrote Van Horne to raise a Sergeant's command of fifteen men for guard duty, which he did, and continued in service until the close of the year. In the summer of 1794, Gen. Gibson sent him an Ensign's commission with instructions to enlist forty or fifty men for frontier duty. This company, to which nearly all of the settlers on French Creek belonged, erected a block-house that year on the northeast corner of Water Street and Steer's Alley. The command was in active service, though stationed at Meadville from the 4th of August until December 31, 1794, scouting through the surrounding forests and guarding against Indian surprise. In 1795, Gen. Gibson forwarded to him a Captain's commission with orders to raise a company which was to assist in protecting the surveyors and workmen then engaged in laying out and building a road from Waterford to Erie. This company was on duty in that capacity from June until the close of the year. Upon the expiration of his last term of military service he settled permanently on his farm of over 400 acres below Meadville, where he spent the remaining years of his life.

Mr. Van Horne was married September 27, 1798, to Sarah Dunn, a daughter of James and Priscilla Dunn, natives of New Jersey, who settled in Crawford County in 1794. Mrs. Van Horne was born in New Jersey, April 12, 1773, and bore him the following children: Jane, July 10, 1799, married George Anderson and died in this county; James, April 22, 1801, died in this county; Priscilla, December 10, 1803, married T. J. Fox, Alden, and died in Pittsburgh; Harriet, June 9, 1805, died unmarried in this county; Thomas, July 26, 1809, still residing on the old homestead, settled by his father; Cornelius, March 3, 1812, died in this county. Mr. Van Horne was a short, stout, rugged man, possessing great muscular power, and was regarded a model fron-tiersman. He lived to nearly ninety-six years of age, but both body and mind had become frail ere he was called from the scenes of life. He died July 24, 1846, and his widow followed him the succeeding March, after a wedded life of nearly half a century. Mr. Van Horne was of a quiet, peaceable disposition, a kind husband and father, a faithful citizen and an honest man.

Robert Fitz Randolph died at his farm south of Meadville July 16, 1830, in the eighty-ninth year of his age. He was born in Essex County, N. J., about 1741, and came of Scotch ancestry. He married when quite young, and in 1771 removed with his family to Northampton, now Lehigh County, Penn.; thence in 1773 to Northumberland County, then the western frontier of the State. In 1776 the Indians swooped down upon the settlers of that locality, killing many and driving the balance from their homes. Mr. Fitz Randolph fled with his family to Berks County, but the following year returned to his deserted home, and soon after joined Col. William Cook's regiment, and fought in the battle of Germantown October 3, 1777. He served only a brief period when he was discharged and returned to his home on the Susquehanna. Another raid was made upon the settlement by the cruel and unrelenting savages, who murdered and pillaged along the whole frontier. Finding no prospect of peace or safety for his family, he went back to his native State where they would at least be secure from the terrors of the scalping-knife. He then re-entered the army and served until the close of the war. Upon the dawn of a glorious peace, in 1783, Mr. Fitz Randolph returned to Northumberland County, Penn., and settled on Shamokin Creek, where he resided until 1789, when he came with his family to the valley of French Creek, arriving at the site of Meadville on the 6th of July. As previously related in this chapter, his son, James Fitz Randolph, was one of the nine who came out in 1788, and upon the land selected by James, some two miles south of the site of Meadville, in what is now Mead Township, his father settled and resided until his death.

Mr. Fitz Randolph was in his seventy-second year when the war of 1812-15 broke out, and on the first call for volunteers he started for Erie, with four of his sons and two grandsons to offer his services to his country. Upon arriving at Lake Conneauttee, in Erie County, he was persuaded by some friends to return home, nevertheless the prompt action demonstrates the fiery patriotism with which this old pioneer was imbued. He was the father of five sons and two daughters, viz.: Esaac, died in this county in September, 1854; James, the first of the family to come to this valley, died on his farm in Mead Township in September, 1835; Edward, removed to the West and there died; Robert, died in this county; Taylor, also spent his life here; Sarah, married Kennard Hamilton, and moved to Iowa, and Margaret married William Jones, of Mead Township. Mr. Fitz Randolph was a man who mingled little in the controversies and cares of public life. He cultivated by precept, as well as by example peace on earth and good will toward men. The friend who visited his home was sure to receive a cordial welcome, while the stranger or unfortunate were never sent away empty-handed. Old and full of days he went down to the grave without leaving behind him a single enemy.

Of his children, Edward Fitz Randolph took the most prominent part in the early events of this region. He was born in what is now Lehigh County, Penn., March 1, 1772, and was in his eighteenth year when the family removed to the valley of French Creek. He served as a volunteer in 1791, doing duty at Fort Franklin from April 1 until July, when he went to Pittsburgh, and in the spring of 1792 entered the Government employ in transporting provisions from that point to Fort Franklin. During the year 1792 he and Daniel Ransom were sent to build a mill for Cornplanter, at his village on the Allegheny River. Ransom, who was the millwright, did not, for some reason begin the work, and after remaining at Cornplanter's village about four months, Mr. Fitz Randolph returned to his former occupation of transporting provisions. A part of the season of 1793 he supplied Ensign Bond's command, then stationed at "Mead's Block-house." In September of that year he was employed by Maj. Isaac Craig, the Government Quartermaster at Pittsburgh, to go down the Ohio with Col. Clark in charge of a boat loaded with ammunition for Gen. Wayne's army, then organizing at Fort Washington (Cincinnati). Mr. Fitz Randolph returned to Pittsburgh in December, thence to the Mead settlement. In May, 1794, he with several other pioneers of French Creek took a lumber raft from David Mead's mill down the stream to the Allegheny, thence to Pittsburgh. He was there engaged by Gen. John Wilkins to pilot Capt. Ebenezer Denny through the forest to Fort Le Boeuf, but on arriving at Meadville Mr. Fitz Randolph was taken sick, and his brother, James, conducted the officers the remaining distance.

Upon his convalescence he again went to Pittsburgh, and in July, 1794, joined Capt. John Heath on his way to Fort Franklin, with a re-enforcement for that garrison, whence he came to Meadville. About the first of August, a soldier having been killed by the Indians near Fort Franklin, Capt. Heath wrote to Robert Fitz Randolph for some men competent to act as scouts or spies, and Luke Hill, John Wentworth, John Baum and Edward Fitz Randolph were recommended for the work. Mr. Fitz Randolph was engaged in this dangerous service, and in carrying expresses from Pittsburgh to Fort Le Boeuf throughout the month of August, traversing the Indian trails by day, and sleeping at night in his blanket beneath the protecting branches of the forest. In the spring of 1795 Capt. Russell Bissell began the erection of a fort at Erie, and in August, Edward and Taylor Fitz Randolph were employed by Maj. Craig to go to Erie as teamsters, and assist in the construction of the fort. Their father furnished three yoke of oxen and Cornelius Van Horne one yoke for the purpose. They worked at Erie until November, then returned to Meadville. Edward Fitz Randolph was married in 1797, to Elizabeth Wilson, a daughter of Benjamin Wilson, and settled on a farm in what is now Vernon Township, where he resided until his removal to the West. For a brief period during the war of 1812–15, he was at Erie, thence went to Buffalo as a teamster for the Commissary Department.

It was from Edward Fitz Randolph that Mr. Alfred Huidekoper, in 1846, obtained most of his facts relating to the first settlement of the county. He says: "Though young at the time, Mr. Fitz Randolph took a prominent part in the first settlement of the county, was occasionally employed by the officials of the Government, and had otherwise an opportunity of becoming well informed about its early history. For fifty-seven years he has lived in this county, forty-nine of which have been spent upon the farm where he now resides, about two miles west of Meadville. Tall, erect, venerable and active, his vigor at the age of seventy-four adds another to the many instances of a hardy constitution, acquired by exposure in youth to the vicissitudes of a border life. When I called upon him I found him at work alone in his sugar-camp, and while seated on a log in front of his boiling kettles, recounting his reminiscences of past events, he seemed indeed an appropriate historian of times when men's homes were the open air, and their whole stock of furniture an iron vessel like the one before us."

None of the first settlers of this county are now living, and but few of their children who yet survive have minds that have stood the wear of time and the infirmities of age, or whose memories go back sufficiently to retain and describe with satisfactory clearness the events which transpired on the banks of French Creek during the last decade of the eighteenth century. When the first band of hardy pioneers came to this valley there were none to dispute their right but the tawny sons of the forest, from whose pitiless hands they had suffered much in the past. But their spirit of enterprise and determination to secure a permanent abode cheered them in their herculean task, and sustained them under every privation, danger and difficulty incident to a home in the wilderness. The comforts and advantages which their children subsequently enjoyed were procured by privations and sufferings, from the undergoing of which the most daring frontiersman well might shrink. Yet their descendants are now in possession of the soil obtained and prepared for them by these brave pioneers, and while viewing the beautiful hills and valleys thickly dotted with homes of civilization, can truly say with the poet:

"This is the land our fathers loved,
The homestead which they toiled to win;
This is the ground whereon they moved,
And these the graves they slumber in,
And we the sons by whom are borne
The mantles which the dead have worn."

THE last decade of the eighteenth century witnessed the advent of many settlers into the beautiful valley of French Creek. The rich bottoms along the navigable streams were the first choice of the average pioneer, and as no roads then existed in this locality, the water-ways were the principal means of transportation. All north and west of the Allegheny and Ohio Rivers was a vast wilderness over which the Indian hunters roamed in pursuit of game. It was natural that they would look with jealousy upon the influx of white men, and as a result could not at all times restrain their malevolent feelings. They could illy brook the sure prospect of the conversion of their beautiful hunting grounds into peaceful farms of ancient foes. The charms of war and the chase, even with civilized man, are rarely dissolved when they mingle with the memories of youth, but they were all of life to the Indian warrior, therefore the aged Indians were taciturn and sullen over the loss of the hills and valleys dotted with the graves of their forefathers. They had
